

Sled

The wolves bite,
strip the heavy sun.

We move
in stammers of flesh.

Long waves
pull at the air,
spread lines
thick tears
on her face.

Restless
the sled
gives evening
fresh brown curves.

Ancestor's bone
wears
the lake.

M. P. LANTEIGNE